I cannot promise you that by electing me, ProFacs will receive riches and glory beyond our imagination, or that you will pass your exams and graduate with honours. However, I will work to ensure your well-being in this University. I believe our time here should go by in a comfortable and fair manner, with no questionable decisions and no poor allocation of resources. I will uphold this conviction in the Council. I am running to be your loyal representative. Let's work together to make the University better for us now, and better for students in the future. Thanks!

Phil Cuvin

My name is Phil Cuvin. I am a first-year undergraduate student at the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering. Throughout high school, I served as the head of timekeeping at my school's athletics department, and as editor of my school's yearbook. I was also the captain of my school's trivia and robotics teams. As a member of the Governing Council, I will serve this University in a judicious and loyal manner, represent of the interests of the undergraduate student body, and support policies that ensure the University's continued relevance and academic authority in coming years. <http://individual.utoronto.ca/philocuvin>

Andrew Girgis

I was privileged to serve on the Governing Council for three consecutive terms from 2012-2015 and was dedicated to fulfilling the diverse obligations expected from a steward of the University. I was privileged to serve for the Executive Committee, the Academic and Business Boards and the Committee on Academic Policy and Programs to name a few of my roles. Outside of University governance, I authored several peer-reviewed articles and was a recipient of a national award for an innovative start-up business. I am committed to applying my accrued experience with your continued support and continue shaping our University moving forward.

Mallory Estelle Jackman

As a member of the Governing Council, I will endeavour to uphold the best interests of The University while acting as a representative of the views of all learners within Professional Faculties, including the Faculty of Medicine. My sentiment for government has been cultivated through my current appointment as an undergraduate student representative on the University of Toronto Academic Board, my position as Charity Representative for the Faculty of Medicine Class Council, and participation in advocacy initiatives at Queen's Park through the Ontario Medical Student's Association. I hope to be elected as one of the undergraduate student voices on this council.

The experience of Engineering Idol competition benefits me to be an asset. The scientific fair has improved my communication and cooperation skills, and get me well prepared for the broad meetings. Debating experience has improved my skills in persuading and leading. Moreover, I am always dedicated throughout the preparation process, and I will also be devoted in the future. Last but not least, I have learnt how to make use of time wisely under pressure and in the shortage of time. If you want better governance for the school, I will be your best choice.
