Memorandum to: From:	Planning and Budget Committee Avrum I. Gotleib, Chair, Planning and Budget Committee
Subject:	Proposal to Revise the Terms of Reference Concerning
	Concurrence with Proposals to Approve New Academic Programs

Under its current terms of reference, the Planning and Budget Committee has been called upon (a) to consider the planning and budget implications of proposals to establish new academic programs, and (b) to concur with the recommendation of the Committee on Academic Policy and Programs to establish them. Three factors make it timely to review that provision.

The first factor is the University's new budget model, which enables each academic division to allocate its own net revenue – the revenue it generates minus its share of University-wide expenses, its contribution to student aid and its contribution to the University Fund. If, therefore, a division wishes to allocate a portion of its net revenue to a establish a new academic program, it is reasonable that it be permitted to do so without central governance approval. As a result, in all or almost all cases, the proposals for new academic programs that have been brought to the Planning and Budget Committee have had no requirement for an additional allocation of funding to the academic division. The Committee has been advised that there are no implications for the University budget. It would, therefore, make sense that the Planning and Budget Committee consider proposals for new academic programs only in any cases where their establishment would require the allocation of additional resources to the division proposing the program. Proposals for most programs, which would require no allocation of resources to the division beyond its net revenue, would be considered solely on their academic merits by the Committee on Academic Policy and Programs. Those proposals would in appropriate cases be recommended for approval by the Academic Board with confirmation of that approval by the Executive Committee.

The second factor is the Report of the Task Force on Governance. That Task Force sought in its Report, among other things, to avoid duplication. Its Report, approved by the Governing Council on October 28, 2010, included recommendation 16, which urged "that the terms of reference of the Academic Board and its Planning and Budget Committee be revised to clarify their respective responsibilities for reviewing and approving divisional academic plans and to provide appropriate delegation and oversight to divisional Councils and to divisions." The Planning and Budget Committee would review a division's plans – including its plans for new programs – at a high level, but would not need to look more specifically at the plans for individual programs. Avoiding duplication, that would be left to the Committee on Academic Policy and Programs, which would where appropriate make a recommendation to the Academic Board. From a planning perspective, consideration of proposals by the Planning and Budget Committee would be necessary only where a plan for a new program would have effects outside of the division offering the plan – either on other University divisions or outside of the University.

The third factor concerned the revised Policy for Approval and Review of Academic Programs (approved by the Governing Council on June 24, 2010) and the detailed University of Toronto Quality Assurance Process (the U.T.QAP). The new Policy sets a very high standard for the program review process. It stipulates that the review process will "address the quality of programs, and how the programs and the units in which they reside compare to the best in their field among international peer institutions." It strengthens Governing Council oversight of the review process. Because governance would be vigilant with respect to the performance of programs, there would be less need to scrutinize their initiation and change. There would not be need for proposals to be examined by both policy committees of the Academic Board, the Board itself and perhaps also the Executive Committee of the Governing Council.

The purpose of this proposal is to recommend amendments to section 4.2.2 of the terms of reference of the Planning and Budget Committee to require that a divisions' proposals for new academic programs be brought to the Committee only in cases where such proposals: (a) would require the allocation of additional resources, or (b) would have significant planning implications in terms of effects outside of the division proposing to offer the program. It should be stressed that the Committee would continue, pursuant to section 4.4.1 of its terms of reference to deal with "plans and proposals to establish, disestablish, or significantly restructure academic units."
